

Bred for strength and as an ally of the gamekeeper in his war against poachers, fiercely loyal to its family yet with a loving and kind temperament, the Bullmastiff is truly a 'gentle giant'. As one of the largest and heaviest dogs in the world, naturally a fearless protector, the Bullmastiff needs to be understood, treated and trained properly. In return it will give its owner many years of loyalty, love, protection, warmth and affection.

Bill Walkey is especially qualified to write about this impressive dog. He has bred 36 champions under his Shayla prefix, has been Breeder of the Year four times and bred the only Bullmastiff to win both the Canadian and the American National Specialty Shows. This is also the only Canadian dog to win the ABA Specialty (National). Bill has judged in Britain, Denmark, Malta, the United States and Canada, and is one of the judges for the Specialty Show in Finland in 1999.

Owing to this, its origins, purposes and history have become a little obscure over time and lost in the annals of history. In the 1930s, breed historians such as Eric Makins and Arthur Craven did their best to acquaint the public with the breed of that time. Scott Partlow 5.0 out of 5 stars It is also beautifully illustrated. Beautiful pictures. The book has been a significant help to understand the behavior of this great dog. Purchase a newer edition or other current books. The time and effort put into this book by the Author reflects the wealth of extremely accurate knowledge he has of the breed. If you are a prospective first time buyer and looking at becoming the proud owner of such a wonderful breed of dog then this book is a must, It covers all the things you should consider and know before buying, how to choose the right puppy, feeding guides and recipes, Grooming techniques, Health considerations, Breed standards, training considerations, a very detailed history of the breed and much more. I found this book to be so extremely accurate and detailed as to what to expect that I wonder if the author is human or a bullmastiff that learnt to write. I highly recommend this book. Although, my first take on the book is that it was too focused on the professional breeder and showing the dog, I find I continue to go back to this book for basic information. Seems that I glean a little more info with each reread. I still have unanswered basic questions but overall the book gave me much valuable information. We love the breed and are now 8 months into rearing a beautiful brindle bullie girl. Sorry, we failed to record your vote. Please try again. They are part Mastiff, crossed with the ancestor of Bulldogs. They are not quite as tall or as calm as Mastiffs, though they are calmer than most bull terriers. They are strongwilled dogs which tend to bond strongly with their human family, and love attention. This desire for attention can be harnessed in training them. Welltrained and wellsocialized Bullmastiffs tend to be very good with children, though they are not always wellbehaved with other dogs, even after socialization as pups. They should not be taught to distrust strangers. Even wellsocialized Bullmastiffs tend to be reserved with strangers, and are bold and fearless if threatened. They are large, powerful dogs. Extensive and ongoing socialization is important, as is training, so you can get your dog to leave people alone when you ask. They need to have house rules made clear to them from when they are pups, and taught not to jump up or pull on the leash, from when they are little, because they dont stay little for long. They can switch off if they are shouted at in training, and benefit from working with a calm, eventempered trainer. They do benefit enormously from going out and about though, even if you have to time your walks so they dont have to meet a lot of other dogs. Bullmastiffs dont do well in outdoor kennels, tending to prefer the company of their human family. They are not dogs to leave tied up unattended on a chain, since they dont stand sun or cold well, they suffer if they are left isolated, and are not safe from being teased by people at a distance. Anyone who teases and comes close to a chained Bullmastiff could be hurt, and seriously hurt in the case of a child. A Bullmastiff left outside unattended a lot is also likely to develop behavioural problems.

Like most members of the bulldog family, they may suffer from breathing difficulties and snore, as well as drool. They also tend to suffer from extremes of heat or cold. They do need exercise, but are not runningaround dogs, and prefer to walk at a dignified pace with their owners. Bullmastiff pups shouldnt be pushed into overexerting themselves by jumping a lot, since this can affect their bone growth. Its clearly written, and is very helpful for novice Bullmastiff owners, as well as being informative enough to interest experienced owners, Its also very well illustrated. Short and weather resistant Color The Bullmastiff is mastiff type dog, and was originally developed by 19th century gamekeepers to guard estates. The breed was created by crossing the English Mastiff with the now extinct Old English Bulldog. Red can range from a light redfawn to a dark, rich red. Brindles are a striped overlay of the fawn or red. A Bullmastiff should have no white markings, except for on the chest where a little white is allowed. The term describes a flat faced, shortened muzzled dog. An issue people have with the breed is that the dog may jump onto an unfamiliar person and tackle them until told to stop. This is why Bullmastiff owners must greet newcomers to the dog at their first interaction. For a Bullmastiff to become a well behaved family member, consistency is needed.

No special guard training is needed for a Bullmastiff to react appropriately if its family is endangered. Both are recessives and not common. The Dudley, named after a notable Bulldog breeder of the 19th century, the Earl of Dudley, is a lack of pigment in the mask. It can be liver colored or simply not present.
