The Craftsman trademark was registered by Sears on May 20, 1927. A variety of companies manufactured tools for Sears under the Craftsman name. The known makers of woodworking machines, metalworking machines, engines, motors and vises are listed below. Companion tools were less expensive than the contemporaneous Craftsman tools. It was replaced by the Dunlap name in 1941. Interestingly, in 1998 Sears applied for a trademark on the Companion name, for use in on a vast list of products. Some older Dunlap machines were still good quality, and remain very good values. Here is a list of known North American based makers of their machinery with their model number prefixes some companies do not have a model number prefix because they manufactured for Sears before they introduced the prefix system. Of course, Sears sells an enormous variety of products that are outside the scope of this site. We solely cover woodworking and metalworking machinery plus the engines and motors that powered them, and of those we only cover products made in USA, Canada and the UK. Sears also used the Companion, Dunlap, and Fulton names. In Canada, the Craftsman name was also used by Simpsons Sears Ltd. The store sold them to Richard W. Sears, a local telegraph operator, who sold them to railway workers for a profit. Sears realized that there was a good market for this service, and started the R. W. Sears Watch Co. He relocated to Chicago in 1887, and found a partner, watch repairman, Alvah C. Roebuck. In 1893 the company was renamed to Sears, Roebuck and Co. Sears, Roebuck expanded rapidly in the 1890s because of their catalog sales, especially to farmers. <http://manegedebuitenwijck.nl/uploads/ford-bf-manual-download.xml>

The image is a vintage advertisement for a Sears Craftsman 12-inch wood-turning lathe. It features a central illustration of the lathe, which is a long, narrow wooden table with a metal frame and a motor on the left side. The motor is a black, boxy unit with a circular fan on top. The lathe has a long, thin bed with a metal carriage and a tool rest. The advertisement is set against a light yellow background. On the left side, there is a vertical column of text. At the top, the word "Sears" is in a box, followed by "owners manual" in a smaller font. Below that, two model numbers are listed: "MODEL NO. 113.228000 LATHE ONLY" and "MODEL NO. 113.228160 LATHE WITH MOTOR". At the bottom left, there is a "CAUTION:" section with the text "Read GENERAL and ADDITIONAL SAFETY INSTRUCTIONS carefully". In the center, there is a "Sears CRAFTSMAN" logo. Below the logo, the text "12-INCH WOOD-TURNING LATHE" is written in a bold, sans-serif font. At the bottom right, there is a list of three items: "• assembly", "• operating", and "• repair parts". At the very bottom, there is a line of small text: "Sold by SEARS, ROEBUCK AND CO., Chicago, IL. 80684 U.S.A."

In 1925 they opened their first retail store. By 1933 they had 400 stores. In 1927, Sears hired Arthur Barrows to head the company's Hardware Department. Barrows knew hardware and wanted to create a brand name for Sears hardware that distinguished it from other manufacturers. Dunlap immediately upgraded the quality of the tools. He threw out all the big, clumsy, cheap, cast-iron hammers and wrenches, and the soft screwdrivers that were hangovers from the days when farmers were the company's biggest customers. Dunlap recognized that America had moved into the automobile age and that Sears needed a line of high quality tools to meet this new demand. He decided to improve the look of Craftsman tools by adding chrome plate to improve the finish, color, and trim on wrenches and sockets, and high impact plastic handles on screwdrivers. Still, it may take some effort to track down what you are looking for, and if your machine is especially old pre-WWII or obscure then you may be unsuccessful. The list below contains suggestions on where to look. Just put in your model number into the search box and search. Call the Sears Parts Line, 18004694663, and have your model number ready. This is completely free, including shipping. Earlier Sears manufacturer lists incorrectly identified these makers. Brian Kachadurian was the one who nailed down both makers, based on a comparison of Sears-badged motors and grinders compared to products known to have been manufactured by Sunlight and Delco. In the case of Sunlight, OWWM contributor Jeff Wilson provided a key piece of evidence in the form of a patent number on a Companion bench grinder that is identical to a later model with model number prefix 115. SKF confirmed that an odd-sized SKF bearing used in one of those 551 motors was made exclusively for Leland. Thanks to Brian Kachadurian for making this connection.

The owner of the brand is KCD IP, LLC, an entity of Sears Holdings. Barrows' idea was to find an impressive brand name that would have stood out among other manufacturers. That was a good area for Craftsman to start successfully in the years of difficult economic situation in the USA in the 1930s. Tom Dunlap, a successor of Barrows as a head of hardware department, decided to create a line of tools that would satisfy the demands of the automotive industry as America was transitioning to the era of automobiles. He upgraded the quality of tools and first of all he abandoned the old, clumsy cast iron hammers and wrenches as well as soft screwdrivers which he thought to be holdovers of the past. Dunlap applied chrome plating to the tools with the aim to make them more attractive, with good finish and color. In addition he added high impact plastic handles on screwdrivers. Some people were skeptical of the innovations, but it worked, and in a year Sears' sales of tools rose sixfold. In order to distinguish Craftsman items from the manufacturer's own products or from other brands which the manufacturer makes, Craftsman brand products may be produced with super characteristics and purposes. Sometimes Craftsman products and products of other brands are made identical, the only difference is a brand name on them. Starting from 2010 Craftsman hand tools such as wrenches, ratchets and sockets having been manufactured by Apex Tool Group in China and Taiwan; but Western Forge produces screwdrivers, adjustable wrenches, pliers and larger mechanic tool sets in the United States. Waterloo Industries produces tool storage, DeWalt Air Power makes air compressors.

Techtronic Industries is involved in the production of portable power tools, the Chamberlain Group produces garage door openers, Emerson Electric Company and DeWalt manufacture bench and stationary power tools. And in terms of quality Craftsman tools have been highly appreciated by Advertisement But Stanley said Sears' new line of professionalgrade mechanics' tools under the "Craftsman Ultimate Collection" brand, as well as Sears' efforts to promote itself as "the real home of the broadest assortment of Craftsman," violate the companies' agreement, according to a lawsuit filed Wednesday in federal court in New York. Stanley, based in New Britain, Conn., said the slogan falsely implies Craftsman products sold elsewhere are "illegitimate" and could confuse shoppers and hurt the brand, according to the lawsuit. The brand first appeared on a line of saws and power tools were introduced two years later, in 1929. For years, the overwhelming majority of Craftsman products were sold only at Sears. The deal lets both companies make and sell products under the Craftsman name. By Lauren Zumbach Aug 20, 2018 at 1225 PM But in 2016, longstruggling Sears announced it was looking for ways to get more cash out of its bestknown brands, including Craftsman, Kenmore and DieHard, by expanding their distribution outside its stores. The 2017 sale to Stanley gave Sears an immediate cash infusion and a chance to benefit from the brand's growth at other retailers through royalty payments. It also meant Sears and Stanley began making and selling competing Craftsman products. Breaking Business Newsletter As it happens When business news breaks, be the first to know. You are now following this newsletter. See all newsletters. As Stanley began rolling out its Craftsman products, selling them at retailers including Lowe's and Ace Hardware, Sears defended its ties to the brand. Both companies also agreed not to do anything that could tarnish the brand, according to the lawsuit.

To start viewing messages, There is a huge selection on ebay because of this. I do not know for sure if that is still true or not though, and in this day and age is a bit uncalled for. You may have some luck by giving them a call. Sears should be at least able to print up manuals instore. Their customer service is terrible. Ive been looking for the manuals myself, Im buying a brand new in the box still, Commercial Biesemeyer Fence from the zipcode saws as there affectionately known. Driving two hours one way to buy it, the guy bought the saw and decided to use the incra system on it. I have the lower end model and added cast iron wings from Sears for it and this fence deal came up so I wanted to read over the Sears installation. I downloaded the Biesemeyer install manual off there site but still would like to read over the Sears manual.

But I agree in this day and age you should be able to look over the current models manuals as a PDF or something. There are some subtle differences between the Sears and the steel city saws, so id rather be able to read the Craftsmans version. I have a few here in pdf format. DIGITALLY CLEANED Every page of every manual. Hi, I'm Ray. I've been in the woodworking business for over forty years. Twenty years ago, I decided to go into metalworking as well, in order to make the machinery and jigs that my woodworking required. Since then, I've accumulated many different machines, along with their manuals. As a selftaught craftsman, I've frequently needed manuals and books to help myself set up or operate complicated machines. That is why I started this service with my family to make hardtofind manuals easier for other craftsmen to obtain. I wanted to make the best quality, printed manuals to work with in a shop. After all, I remember the day when they didn't even have computers. We do More than Sell Manuals My son and I do metal and woodworking in our shop. We make some of the smallest inlay in the world. The duck call pictured has over 1,117 individual pieces of wood in it. You can learn more about our shop on our About Us page, or Ozarkwoodworker.com. We also try to help others identify their machines, and share some of the knowledge we've received over the years of experience with rebuilding machines for our shop. That is why we started Ozark Shop Talk Blog to give back to the many people that have helped us learn. We are selftaught machinist and woodworkers, and we had to use the HowTo Books, and information in the manuals to learn ourselves. Please see photos and description for details.
